A. PERSONAL STATEMENT

My research examines the psychological and neural processes involved in self-regulation and social development. All of my work employs a developmental cognitive neuroscience approach to examine the relation between brain development and changes in psychological processes from birth to adulthood, with a special focus on adolescence. Using longitudinal neuroimaging techniques, my lab examines developmental trajectories over time in the domains of working memory, inhibition, planning, risk taking, social learning, social rejection and prosocial behavior, as well as individual differences between individuals. One of my special interests involves enrichment of cognitive and social experiences of children and adolescents using longitudinal, training and intervention designs.

B. CONTRIBUTIONS TO SCIENCE

Besides our mission to do innovative and excellent scientific research, we invest in the contribution and translation of scientific findings to society.

My lab has a strong focus on Open science, including citizen science, co-creation with societal partners, pre-registration, data sharing, facilitate full open access to publications, collaboration and interdisciplinary approaches and science outreach.

Contribution to: Balazs, A. et al. (2019). A consensus-based transparency checklist. Nature Human Behavior [release date Dec 2, 2019]. We present a consensus-based checklist to improve and document transparency of research reports in social and behavioural sciences.
